> kers holding 35 weary hostages aboard a Libyan airliner landed the Boeing-727 in Beirut Wednesday night after announcing they were ending the three-day odyssey in the Lebanese capital.

> A broadcast said the skyjackers' request was radioed to the Beirut control tower as the Boeing-727 entered Lebanese airspace for the third time in 48 hours after a 10 and a half bour stop in Tehran.

> The Lebanese government of President Elias Sarkis tried to prevent the three-engine jetliner from landing in Beirut Monday and Tuesday, but failed. The heavily-armed skyjackers are seeking to dramatize the threeyear-old disappearance of their spiritual leader, Imam Moussa Sadr.

> In the radio transmission received by the Beirut airport control tower, a hijacker who identified himself as Hamzeb said "We want to give ourselves np and release the passen-gers." The pilot of the Boeing told the control tower he had very little fuel left.

Three passengers - a woman, her child and her busband were released from the jetliner hefore it took off from Tehran airport.

Neither the Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman nor the revolutionary guards office could immediately determine the nationality of the released passengers. But the revolutionary guards official said he believed the mother was taken ill on the plane, prompting the skyjackers to set her free along with her husband and child.

There was no immediate word from Iran's Foreign Ministry on what caused the skyjackers to break off negotiations with Ayatollah Khomeini's regime and order the plane to take off. They had appealed upon arrival to the 82-year-old leader to undertake efforts with Col. Muammar. Qaddafi's government to resolve the mystery of the missing Imam who vanished during an official visit to Libya three years ago.

message. Senior administration officials told reporters Tuesday that the United States is planning some form of economic sanctions against Libya, including a possible boycott of Libyan oil. For the second day in a row, President Reagan held a National Security Council meeting on the reported threat. But, evidently, the group concluded the meeting without resolving the issue of how to respond to the threats. One idea considered a possibility, though, is a joint boycott of Libyan oil involving the United States and its major European allies. The White House issued a statement Tuesused mostly for less expensive type fuels and which make up the other one-third of his production of around 8.5 million barrels daily, according to some delegates.

Price-shaving on the scale being considered would affect well under 25 percent of all OPEC oil and knock only a few cents off the average world price, so nobody should expect cheaper petrol at the pumps, they said. But it would slightly ease the burden on some oil companies that are losing money buying high-priced crude and selling refined products in a weak market where demand has fallen. This would make the companies less ready to mark up pump prices.

Falling world demand for OPEC oil has slashed the group's output from around 31 million barrels daily in 1979 to little more than 20 million now, forcing a majority of the 13 members to trim prices this year.

Subroto, outgoing OPEC president, told the opening session of Wednesday's meeting that the glut in the market had imposed a severe test of OPEC unity. But obituaries about its demise bad been premature, he said, adding that OPEC had come through possibly its most difficult year intact.

Altbough the 13 members had agreed on a single base price when they met in Geneva Oct. 29, there remained the challenge of setting fixed differentials that all could accept, Subroto said.

governor-general Ed Schreyer, who signed the resolution into law Tuesday night, was due to present it to the queen's secretary Wednesday.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was expected to introduce the resolution into the British Parliament before it adjourns for holidays for passage early next year.

The resolution asks Britain to 'patriate' the constitution, the 1867 Britisb North America Act, to Canada after inserting a charter of rights and a formula for its amendment here. It was hammered out in 18 months of argument, bargaining and court cases by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers. Nine agreed to a compromise package last month, but Premier Rene Levesque of predominantly Frenchspeaking Quebec refused to sign.

Levesque said the reforms would strip Quebec of powers it aheady enjoyed, and vowed to fight it in the courts. Quebec's dissent was expected to cause objections to the

But Canadian officials said no major delays or arguments were expected in Britain. Trudeau has said changes can be made to the constitution once it is in Canada, to try to get Quebec's support.

On Tuesday, the senate voted overwhelmingly in favor of the historic constitutional reform.

Senators rose to sing the national anthem "O Canada" as the new package cleared its final parliamentary hurdle by a vote of 59-23. The vote came minutes after the Senate rejected a bid by Conservatives to make the constitution more acceptable to Frenchspeaking Quebec province, where parts of the rewritten document have stirred new separatist sentiment.

The complex resolution, adopted last Wednesday by the House of Commons in a 246-24 vote, was to he put aboard a special Defense Department jet late Tuesday for a flight to London.

During Riyadh University speech shara stresses GCC commitment

RIYADH, Dec. 9 (SPA) — The Gulf Cooperation Council is a permanent body and not the result of temporary influence, according to GCC Secretary General Abdullah Bishara.

In an open dialogue with Students of Riyadh University Tuesday night, Bishara said that the power of the GCC is strength to all Arabs. "Preparations are underway at present to reach a method that protects the principles of the council" he said.

The cooperation council is a unique phenomenon in the world, which provides an answer for "many requirements," Bishara told the students. The GCC secretary general had been actively engaged in contacts with various Saudi Arabian officials during the past few days. He was received by Information Minister Muhammad Abdo Yamani Tuesday. The meeting, attended by GCC Assistant Secretary General for Political Affairs Ibrahim Al-Subhi, dealt with information cooperation among Gulf states and further consolidating the existing contacts.

The prime minister was speeking with the Gulf News Agency, Gulf News news-paper and Al-Bahrain weekly regarding the 20th anniversary of Bahrain's ruler's accession and the tenth independence anniversary on Dec. 16. He added that the creation of the Gulf Cooperation Council is only the manifestation of realities.

However, Sheikh Khalifa cautioned that whatever major political developments the area might witness will not take unrealistic proportions "because we dont't like to jump and be suspended in the air. Whatever step we take is thoroughly calculated, " he said. He added that Gulf states must rely on their intrinsic power in facing any danger. In any case, he added, Arah Gulf states are against the policy of super powers despite the numerous unholy designs they face.

The prime minister said Galf states will have to agree on a clear policy regarding the establishment of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union and Eastern Bloc countries. "My country wishes to have good relations with everybody on condition that such relations do not harm us," he added.

Sheikh Khalifa said Gulf leaders are endeavoring to ensure security coordination so their nationals may enjoy peace, security and certainty. He added that the area's nationals placed great hopes on the forthcoming meeting of GCC defense ministers. For his part, he went on, he would have no objection to Gulf prime ministers holding periodical meetings for the sake of coordination.

He said he regrets the present Arah state of disunity and disagreement, hut expressed hope that all efforts will be exerted to restore Arab strength by closing ranks. The area is surrounded by too many dangers, he said, and the Gulf countries have no other choice hut to unite and coordinate efforts.

On Saudi-Bahraini relations, Sheikh Khalifa dwelt on the importance of the causeway between the Kingdom and Bahrain in bringing the two peoples closer to each other and fostering communications. He hailed Saudi Arabia's efforts to help Gulf countries, the Arah and Islamic world in general, and Bahrain in particular.

Yamani expressed full readmess to cooperate with the GCC Secretariat General in all information fields in the future. Bishara said the minister's good initiative will further strengthen cooperation between the secretariat general and information authorities in the Kingdom, as well as the other member states.

Bishara and Suhhi also called on Youth Welfare President Prince Faisal ibn Fahd Monday and reviewed several topics related to sports and youth activities.

"The GCC member states do not intend to influence anyone. They are against suppression. However, these states want the stability of the Gulf, to protect it, maintain its security and preserve its traditions." Bishara told the students.

He stressed that the danger threatening Gulf states results from not settling the Palestinian question. Referring to the Kingdom's presentation of the peace proposal at the Fez Arab summit, Bishara said the plan was a procedural move made by Saudi Arahia on behalf of the Gulf states.

The variation of some me, mber states' relations with certain international parties serves Gulf interests through the GCC, Bishara told his audience. However, these parties cannot benefit from bilateral relations with some of the GCC states without accepting the cooperation council as a whole, he said.

ABU DHABL Dec. 9 (Agencies) -Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky said Wednesday he had asked Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat to send a new representative to Vienna.

Kreisky was speaking to reporters after meeting Arafat during a two-day visit to the United Arab Emirates. Austria was the first Western country to recognize the PLO, but relations between them were frozen last summer after the Palestinian representative in Veinna was recalled after a gun-smuggling incident.

Kreisky said his meeting with Arafat had helped to clear up the situation, and added: "There is no doubt our relations are precisely the same as before." He said: "I have recommended to Arafat to send a bighranking man with prestige (to Vienna). He should be a man of high reputation." The chancellor also said the PLO bad bad nothing to do with "terrorist activities" in Austria. and in fact was firmly opposed to them.

He was referring to an attack on a Vienna synagogue in August, in which two Jews were killed and 20 injured.

Arafat later met Metvin Dymally, a U.S. Democrat Congressman and a member of the Foreign Relations Committee. They discussed Saudi Arabia's Middle East peace plan and the Palestinian issue Arafat urged the U.S. to make concessions and enter into dialogue with the PLO, Dymally said. Arafat later left Abu Dhabi.

Israel to defy U.N. vote on canal issue

TEL AVIV, Dec. 9 (AP) - Israel will go ahead with plans to channel water from the Mediterranean sea to the Dead Sea despite United Nations resolutions condemning the project, Energyy Minister Yitzhak Berman said Wednesday.

Reacting to Monday's approval by the U.N. General Assembly's special political committee of a resolution demanding that Israel drop the project, Berman said Israel was "always ready to sit with Jordan or whoever has claims ... as it wants to build the canal." Berman told Israel radio that even if there was no coordination, Israel was planning the canal. Part of the waterway's planned route is through the occupied Gaza Strip.

Israelis gloat over remarks by Cheysson

TEL AVIV, Dec. 9 (R) - Israeli newspapers were jubilant . Wednesday about what Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir called "a new era in Franco-Israeli relations" following French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson's brief visit here.

The English language Jerusalem Post, in an editorial entitled "Entente Cordial," said the tone of Cheysson's public remarks was "so novel to Israeli cars it still echoes pleasantly the morning after his departure." Cheysson called on Europe to mind its own business and abandon thoughts of a peacemaking role in the Middle East, which left Israelis delighted since they have been highly critical of European peace initives.

The newspaper said ( differences still exist between France and Israel on the Palestinian question but France no longer believes Israel can be dictated to by the Europeans,"

Iran killing war prisoners -- Iraq

BEIRUT, Dec. 9 (AFP) - Iraqi newspapers Wednesday quoted a government spokesman as saying Iran has executed 1,500 Iraqi priosners taken during its offensive that began Nov. 29 on the Iranian front town of Susangerd.

BothAs Saoura and Al Goumhouriya newspapers called the alleged executions "criminal acts without precedent in the world's war annals .. this odious crime will not go without a firm punishment." The newspapers quoted an official spokesman as saying"it has been established for Iraq that Iran executed 1,500 prisoners of war captured before and

Iran-Israel connection

When policy of never dealing with Zionists was abandoned (I)

(EDITOR 'S NOTE: This is the first of a two -part By Staff Writers

LONDON -Figures published by the Central Bank of Iran in August provide a painstakingly accurate account of Iran's imports. Trade partners are fully identified, even when they have, as is the case with such countries like Albania and Botswana, sold no more than ' a few thousand dollars worth of goods to Iran. But pany in Paris, named Iranex which is listed as doing "general trade." We phoned the company's office, asking to talk to Evren and were at first told that he was not in and that we could leave a message. We said we would phone later. When we did phone again a few days later, the number bad been changed to an unlisted one.

Doing business with Iran is specially attractive to Israeli businessmen. Irap pays cash and asks few questions about comparative prices. And Israeli businessmen living and working abroad can keep a foreign bank accounts for eight years, under Israeli law. This is a big advantage considering the poor state of the Israeli economy and the weakness of the Israeli pound. Despite high interest rates in the Zionist state, many Israelis prefer to keep their savings abroad, thinking about "a rainy day." When the Iranian revolution came in 1979, Israel owed Iran over $780 million of which some $450 was represented by Israeli dehts contracted in purchasing Iranian crude oil. The rest consisted of the National Iranian Oil Company's (NIOC) investment in the Eilat-Ashkelon oil pipeline. What happened to that money? Hassan Nazih who was Khomein's first chief of the NIOC said that he discussed the matter with the ayatollah on two occasions. The first time, Khomeini asked him to find out how the money could he retrieved. Nazih, accordingly, established contact with "intermediaries" who quickly came back with the message that Israel was more than willing to negotiate. It was agreed that representatives of both sides should meet in London. Nazih then went to see Khomeini for a second time, reporting on the progress made. The ayatollah was evasive at first but finally insisted that there should he no talks with the Israelis. Nazih said he accordingly gave up the effort. A few months later, however, he heard that "a close relation of the avatollah" had been dispatched to London to make the contact in February 1980. He was not prepared to name the "close relation" but other sources have identified him to us as Sadegh Tabataba' i, a newphew of the disappared Lebanese Shiite leader Imam Mousa Sadr and also related to Khomeini. Tabataba'i who also played a role in negotiating the release of the American hostages bas been linked to the Israeli trade dossier by several of the sources prepared to talk to us. The frequency with which his name has been mentioned in this connection rules out the possibility of collusion or a rumor campaign by any interested party. Tabataba'i reportedly was the one who persuaded Khomeini to accept the Israeli connection. He met Khomeini in November 1980 apparently in collusion with the late strongman Ayatollah Muhammad Beheshti. He told the "Supreme Guide" that Iran needed to secure war supplies through whatever channels available. The need for arms, spare parts and war material in general was pressing. But the nation was also beginning to face the possibility of food sbortages. U.S. President Jimmy Carter bad exempted foodstuff and medical supplies from his list of embargoed goods for Iran. But American dock workers had made it clear they would not load ships destined for Iran. It was Irving Willoughby, a middleman based in Houston, Texas, who suggested that the Iranians find another "end user" to avoid the dockers' quarnatine. The "end user" is the country to which exported goods will ultimately be delivered. Willoughby who is registered as a broker had for years traded with Iran and Iranians. It was his suggestion that Isrsel should be named as "end user." Two small central American republics that had been approached had refused to play the role. We don't know the eventual circumstances of the deal, But we know that Israel which had never imported cereals from the United States became an importer and supposedly bought some 135,000 tons of grain shipped through Houston, during the period December 1980 January 1981 after which the dockers lifted their embargo. The Iranian contactmen in the deal were Ismail Nahidian, a Washington D.C.businessman of Iranian origin, and Mohsen Fatemi who maintains an office on E54 Street in New York. Both are known as early converts to Khomeinism and have financed pro-Khomeini activities in the U.S. and Europe. We interviewed both over the telephone. Nahidian said he would do "everything necessary" to help Iran but would neither confirm nor deny the Israeli connection specifically. Fatemi, on the other hand, said that Iran has" bribed" the Israelis to help break the "satanic embargo imposed against the Islamic republic." He would give no details saying that the Zionists would do everything for money. He also claimed that a certain Reza Sadr who had briefly served as Khomeini's commerce minister had been responsible for the "illegal connection" and that, having been found out, he was now lingering in an Iraaian prison. Whatever the truth of the matter, both Nahidian and Fatemi are closely linked with Tabataba'i both through family links and business interests.

ing the enigmatic Tabataba'i that we were contacted by a certain Yabya M., a former official of the Iranian Commerce Ministery and now an exile in West Germany. He had, somehow, heard of our enquiries and now proposed a meeting in Paris to tell us "the whole story." We checked M's background. He had worked for the Iranian Foreign Ministry under the Shah. After the revolution he became a friend of Abolhassan Bani-Sadi who later became president for a while. M. accompanied Bani-Sadr on various missions organized on Kho-on on Angola's territory in pursuit of SWAPO's forces in the area. Now press reports say that the South Africans have gone into action against SWAPO once more a month ago. Angolan sovereignty was violated again --the South Africans were said to have penetrated 250 kms inside Angola, aiming at destroying SWAPO's main command center. Tens were killed, although the major portion of SWAPO's forces appears to have melted into the bush once the approach of the enemy became known.

Four months have passed since South Africa made its

Thus, while South Africa continues the attempt to impose its own solution on the Namibian (South-West African) crisis, the countries of the so-called "contact group", entrusted with the task of working for an acceptable formula for Namibian independence, keep to their customary silence. The silence of the Western powers represented hy the contact group is echoed by the silence of most of the African nations. SWAPO's fight for independence, and Angola's for its sovereignty, are clearly being denied the help they are entitled to from the African and international communities.

That silence, indeed even connivance, especially from the Western powers who profess their opposition to South Africa's policies in Namibia, can be all too easily explained. Namihia is a land so rich in minerals - gold, uranium, silver to name but a few - that the interests of its people and their right to self-determination are seen as matters of secondary importance.

Saudi Arabian press review

The Saudi Arabian peace plan for the Middle East, the role of Arab leaders in the next summit for forging a unified stand on their prime issue, and the call for Palestinians to deal with the current developments in accordance with their prime interests figured for editorial comments in Wednesday's newspapers.

Al -Bilad noted that the Kingdom's peace plan is a basic pillar of comprehensive Arab strategy for ensuring peace and security in the region. The paper said that the Kingdom was prompted to introduce the peace plan by its historic: Arab and Islamic responsibility for realizing the Arah goals and solving the Arab's prime issue. Commenting on the call of some foreign diplomatic observers that the Arabs should wait for few years before presenting their proposals for solving the Arab-Israel conflict, Al -Jazirah expressed its surprise over such unreasonable reactions, "since this would amount to giving the Zionists free time to launch aggressions on Arab lands and use this time for occupying more and more Arab territories.

"It is the most opportune time for the international community to recognize the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization," the paper said.

Al - Jazirah observed that the declaration of an independent Palestinian state does not require a period of five years as suggested by foreign circles on the pretext that they would like to see some political changes in Israel.

Dealing with the European interest in seeking a fair and just solution of the Mideast issue in the light of the Kingdom's peace plan, Okaz urged the Arab leaders to formulate a unified stance and a unanimous visualization for ensuring a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East.

"The unified option should conlsraeli withdrawal from the Jerusalem, allowing the Palestinian people 10 exercise selfto establish an independent state ceeds in Swiss bank accounts. on their own soil," the paper said.

Al -Riyadh urged the PLO to circumstances and conditions I thought." affecting the Palestinian issue and the region in the light of the greater interests of the Palestinian people.

The paper called on the PLO to determine its stance at the local and international levels in coordination with responsible and sincere Arab efforts in order to ion.

Al-Madinah and Al-Nadwa urged the French External Affairs Minister Claude Cheysson, who concluded his visit to Israel, to affirm the stance of France on the Arah issue, in accordance with the international laws and resolutions, emerging basically from French ideals and traditions. The papers asserted that the Arabs are determined to restore their usurped rights and boped that France, a source of democracy and civilization to the world, will back right, justice and liberty in Palestine. - (SPA)

this meticuluous accuracy is, inexplicably, abandoned when it comes to a curious item simply listed as "others". Thus, it becomes clear that "others" have been selling Iran goods worth more than $55 million a month since December 1980.

The same "others", as if by coincidence, also appears in the Israeli statistics as well, this time as an importer. Figures published by the Israeli Commerce Ministry show "others" as having purchased more than $48 million worth of goods in the same period. Even poor little Burundi is mentioned by name, although it bought only a few thousand dollars of Israeli products. So why should "others" remain anonymous?

Evidently, both Iran and Israel have something to hide, But what? Amid a maze of rumors and leaks, a growingly credible picture of under-the-counter trade between Iran and the Zionist state is now emerging. Both Iranian and European businessmen with intimate knowledge of Iran-Israel trade over the years, are categorical that the two old partners, whose relations were interrupted by the revolution in 1979, are now back doing business together.

Some even claim that the trade link was never truly broken, despite vituperations from the Ayatollahs in Tehran. But Javad G., an Iranian businessman now in exile in Hamburg, West Germany, disputes that. He says he is sure that trade between Iran and Israel was stopped between February 1979 and "sometime at the end of 1980." As a man who had done business with Israel for more than 20 years, he should know.

G. claims that contact between Iran and Israelwas re-established because the Iran-Iraq war comhined with the U.S. trade embargo was forcing Iran's new rulers to abandoning their original claims of never dealing with the Zionists.

An Israeli businessman called Dr. F. who had spent 18 years in Iran, said that Israel has now resourced "at least two-thirds of its previous exports tain Arab demands for a total to Iran." Dr. F. himself had been in the business of exporting Iranian marbles to Italy before the occupied Arab lands, including revolution. He had an 18 percent share in a quarry oear Kerman and a 41 percent share in a stoneeutting plant south of the capital. In the course of determination and coabling them the revolution he sold his assets, placing the pro-

"I thought I had better forget about Iran, at least for 10 years," he recalled in a recent interview in reconsider and reassess fully the Paris." Ayatollaba would never do business with us,

A few weeks after the Iran-Iraq war had begun, to deal with the existing realities of Dr. F. suddenly received a call from two of his old Iranian partners - two brothers called Reza and Mehdi Ebrahimzadeb who had been in the marble trade for years. The two had allied themselves to Ayatollab Khomein's son-in-law Hojatalislam Shahheddin Eshraqi, and had, as a result, come to monopolize the export of Iranian "raw marble" for processing in Italy. They asked Dr. F. to meet them at a trade exhibition in Cologne, West Germany.

refused, because I was not in that line." The "Dr.", however, introduced them to a middieman, simply identified as "Evren", probably a pseudonyn, who was well-established as a broker in the arms market.

We traced the Ebrahimzadeh hrothers who are both in Tehran. They admitted knowing Dr. F. and having done business with him. They said they did not care who belped with their export goods since Iran was short of foreign currency. But they denied having been involved in the arms business. And yet we discovered that they both had registered a comIt was in the course of our investigations concern-

West Europe, U.S. agree to differ on Qaddafi

By Harvey Morris

LONDON -Western Europe has strong economic reasons for wanting to keep out of the increasingly bitter row. hetween the United States and Lihya, according to Western diplomats. With Libyan-trained assassins alleged to he on the loose in the United States and stalking President Reagan, relations between Washington and Tripoli have reached a new low. By contrast, relations between Col. Muammar Qaddafi's administration and Western European governments are described by Western officials as on a better footing than for some time.

An unconfirmed report that President Reagan might now seek to involve his allies in a campaign against Qaddafi comes in the current issue of News week magazine. The U.S. weekly said Reagan is secretly sounding out West European countries on possible joint sanctions against Libya.

Reagan, whose administration regards Qaddafi as a Soviet surrogate and a supporter of terrorism, has so far resisted calls within the United States for a unilateral economic boycott of Libya. This would effectively mean a ban on oil imports from Libya, the United States' third biggest supplier.

But comments by Western European officials indicate they are reluctant to become embroiled in sanctions against Qaddafi. European Common Market (EEC) diplomats interviewed in Tripoli recently commented that, when it came to Qaddafi, Western Europe and Washington had agreed to differ.

One senior diplomat said: "The Europeans have mein's orders, including two to negotiate with Kurdisb rebels in 1979. Later M. joined the commerce ministry as" counsellor on foreign trade." He accompanied Tabateba'i on at loast one trip to Europe during which he contacted exiled former colleagues.

Naturally, his story is uncheckable heyond a certain point. But this is what he had to say. Early in November 1930 (he does not remember the exact date) he accompanied Tabataba'i to Zurich where they stayed at the Seiderhof Hotel for two days. We checked with the hotel and they confirmed that two Iranians bad stayed there between Nov. 7 and 9. M. was one of the two but the second one called himself "Namazi". In any case, M. said it was there that Tabataba' i met with the mysterious" Evren" and an aide called "Zlotowski". Tabataba' i said Iran was at war and did not care who provided it with the supplies it needed. Evren boasted that he could provide "everything". He also said that he had " the necessary covers" in Cyprus, Turkey and Greece and that 'maximum precaution'' would be exercised.

"We are in business and not in politics," M. quoted "Evren" as saying. "We don't want to embarrass anyone politically. We just want to trade."

Tabataba'i, according to M. was less than tactful and quickly made it clear that he was after almost everything and that price would he no problem. Two meetings were held, according to M., one at the Seiderhof cafe where the two Iranian representatives drank only tomato juice and the second in a 'downtown cafe'' because Tabataba'i was afraid of "CIA tape-recorders everywhere."

It was agreed that "experts" abould meet men introduced by "Evren" as soon as possible to proceed from the board agreement just reached. M. lains that "Evren" gave Tabataba'i a card, telling him it included "all the necessary numbers you need." Tabataba'i said he would send his men "within a week."

(To be continued tomorrow)

little effect on U.S. thinking about Libya because we are marching on a different plane." The diplomat said EEC ministers agreed earlier this year on the need to maintain a dialogue with Libya and added: "Behind this there is an economic reality."

The reality translates into billions of dollars of sales for Western Europe's recession-hit industries. and, in exchange, steady supplies of Libyan oil. Political relations between Western Europe and Qaddafi have frequently been stormy but economic ties have steadily grown with the increase of Libya's oil wealth.

The issues at the root of the Washington-Tripoli conflict - Qaddaff a alleged support for terrorism, his policies toward his African oeighbors and his territorial claims on Mediterranean waters - have also caused friction with Western Europe. But the sometimes violent disputes have not led to a complete breakdown in relations.

France has seeo. its Tripoli Embassy sacked by demonstrators. Libya's People's Congress even threatened it with war last year in a dispute about French aid to Tunisia. The French nevertheless maintain a full diplomatic presence in Tripoli and it played a key role in ironing out recent, differences over Chad.

Italy, the former colonial power in Libya, has clashed with Qaddafi over territorial questions. As recently as last October an Italian air force jet intercented a Libyan airliner that strayed into Italy's airspace and in the past the Libyans have opened fire on Italian fishing boats. Italy remains, however, Libya's largest supplier of imports and relations are.

generally good.

Qaddafi has insulted West Germany by calling it an American colony yet continues to trade with it: Britain's relations with Libya have often been near breaking point. Yet Libya is now one of Britain's top markets in the Middle East, purchasing almost a billion dollars a year in British exports.

Western diplomats said Britain was particularly angered by assassinations of Libyan exiles, which it believed were sanctioned by Qaddafi. They noted, however, that the killings appeared to have ceased following a warning from the EEC countries that they could affect trade relations with Libya.

The Libyan heavy industry secretary. Omar Mostafa Mootasser, recently made the first visit to Britain by an official of his country since 1971. His message, according to Libyan sources, was that Britain should act according to its interests in the Arab world and not follow what he described as the dictates of the White House.

Washington is already pressuring its reluctant allies into joining a boycott against Libya. The Irish Airline Acr Lingus last week canceled a $5 million sale of a used Boeing 707 to Libya under pressure from the U.S. government, Washington pointed out to Dublin a U.S. Department of Commerce order issued in September that prohibits the re-export of American-made goods to Libya.

Ireland's oppositioo transport spokesman, Albert Reynolds, accused the Dublin government of being "weak-kneed". Bowing to U.S. pressure, he said, could damage the Irish Republic's $150 million annual trade with the Libyans. (R)

Bullock carts and high technology Satellites made in India now in space, serving the people is program's goal

By Stuart Auerbach

BANGALORE, India (WP) - India used bullock carts and high technology to become the only Third World oation to plant a flag firmly in outer space. One of the two "Made In India" working satellites currently orbiting the earth was carried to an open field oear the Indian Space Research Organization (ISRO) ceoter here in an all-wood hullock cart so scientists could gauge its radio-magnetic emissions in a metal-free covironmeot.

The space scientists here are proud of that mix of ancieot and modern, which reflects Indian society itself, and they display the photograph of the spacecraft on the hullock cart as part of the research center's promotional slide show.

India's space experts justify the expeodi-ture of $664.5 millioo oo the space program during the past 19 years as part of the job of turning an underdeveloped country into a modern oation, a joh they say must he accomplished by Indians, not foreign experts. As a result of India's push to develop its own space program, 18 months ago it became ooe of seveo oations to launch its own satellite into earth orbit with a domestically manufactured rocket. The tiny Rohini satellite spun around the earth for a full year, looger than expected, hefore falling into the atmosphere and hurning up. India has not done as well with two other tries to launch satellites into orbit atop its four-stage, solid-fuel rocket, SLV3. The first try. in the summer of 1979, was called "partially unsuccessful" after the satellite sputtered into the sea shortly after launch because all the stages did not ignite. The latest attempt, last May, stayed in space only 10 days instead of the planned 90 because the tocket failed to lift it into a high ecough orbit. Despite these problems, commoo to all fledgling space efforts. India's satellitebuilding program is rated by outside experts as a success.

Four Indian-made satellites are currently circling the earth, two still working while the others were turned off after having done their jobs.

They all were launched oo other oations' rockets, three supplied by the Soviet Union and one. by France. The U.S. National Aerooautics and Space Administration is to launch two communications satellites now being built for India by an American company. While India's satellites represent significant technological achievemeot, they still are a decade or two behind current technology. Space officials here agree with the observation of a Western scientist that "there is nothing India has done that has oot been done elsewhere."

The Soviet-launched, Indian-made Bhaskara I, for example, was doing lesssophisticated remote sensing of the earth for India in 1979 than two American spacecraft - mariner 6 and 7 — did 10 years earlier.

Nonetheless, ISRO Director Satish Dhawan staunchly defended as part of the job of nation-huilding India's policy of making its own satellites rather than buying them from the world's technological giants.

"We are at a stage of development and our geopolitical positioo as a nonaligned nation is such that we have got to huild our country and utilize our best talent and manpower," he said in a cooversation with a groop of foreign correspondents visiting the space facilities

here. "How do we utilize them if we go oo huying

Despite Wood's death MGM looking for solution of how to complete movie

By Peter J. Boyer

LOS ANGELES (LAT) - With production of MGM's Brainstorm shut down last week by the death of Natalie Wood, the studio is wrestling with the decisioo of whether to scrap the movie and collect roughly $ 10 million in insurance or to complete the film without one of its principal players.

The latter course apparently represents a mooumeotal challeoge because ooe of Wood's unshot scenes was critical to the film's final sequeoce.

Sources indicate that in that final segment, Wood's character" experiences" the death of her husband through a machine that transfers human thought and emotion, setting off a prolooged special-effects sequence that was to have been the climax of the film.

Close-up reaction shots are said to be necessary to the sequence, all hut precluding research scientist (Christopher Walken) whose singular attention to a special project has strained his marriage.

The film's actioo starts wheo Walkeo makes a breakthrough, creating a device that 'plugs into" the hrain, monitoring and transmitting thoughts and feelings.

The device - a sort of wired-up football helmet, connected to a computer - is hailed as the greatest communications innovatioo in history and, indeed, the gizmo seems capable of working wooders. Walkco's and wood's characters share each other's thoughts, reliving their wedding ceremooy, and their marriage is revitalized.

As the story cootinues, the possibilities of the device seem infinite, and it is seized upoo by the competing factions within Walken's' research-and-development firm. The manufacturing and sales divisions covision a sort of super TV that allows the "viewer" to actually experience a program. The gadget is put satellites? There are many examples around the world that tell yon if you don't huild your oation yourself no one else is going to come and build it for you," he continued.

He and other Indian space officials maintained that the price is cheap compared to what India has attained, though other experts believe this country could have gotteo more for its money soooer by buying satellites and technology.

Dhawan, however, insisted that India needs to learn how to use high technology to prosper.

Without it, he said, "we would not have the self-reliance, the streogth ... to influence world markets. Yon are merely the recipients of the results of world marketing."

Following that policy, Dhawan, 51, promised that the next generation of communicatioos satellites will he Indian-made, and some time in the next decade India will he able to launch these large, complex and expensive satellites with its own rockets.

Experts donbt that India will he able to achieve those ambitious goals, especially the ability to loft a satellite into orbit with the oeeded degree of reliability oo an Indian-made rocket fired from Sriharikota Island m the Bay of Bengal, about 50 miles east of Madras. The rocket that lifted an Indian satellite receotly is oot considered reliable enough for such an expensive load.

While ISRO follows the national credo of trying to make satellites and rockets itself, the space effort is not isolated from the mainstream of world technology the way India's flagging ouclear program is. Indian was forced to go it alone in its ouclear program because its diversioo of technology and materials for India's 1974 atomic blast violated international standards.

The space effort plays a major role in India's campaign to project itself as the most developed of the undeveloped nations - a leader in the Third World, a power oo the South Asian subcootineot, a force to be reckoned with in international affairs and an incipieot industrial giant.

The government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who also holds the portfolio of Minister of Space, would rather see India portrayed as a space-age natioo than as the 15th poorest country, with half of its 650,000 villages lacking electricity and two-thirds of its 680 million people unable to read or write. Some Indians, however, questioo the wisdom of spending India's scarce financial and technical resources oo a space program.

In an article in the Indian Express last mooth, Jagan Chawla criticized the boasts made by press and politicians after the laooch by France of the Indian satellite Apple, which Gandhi called "a symbol of our growing technological self-reliance".

According to Chawla, "Apple is oot a fully" Indian communications satellite as it was made out to be." ISRO officials acknow-ledged that half of its components were brought from overseas, thoogh they said with more time India could have made most of them:

the use of a double m Wood's place.

Further complicating MGM's decision is the studio's belief that it had a winner in Brainstorm . The movie is a science-fictioo thriller that seemed especially suited to the pyrotechnical inclinatioos of its director. Douglas Trumbull, whose special-effects wizardry was demoostrated io The Andromeda Strain and Close Encounters of the Third Kind.

In fact, sources said, the entire movie was one loog series of special effects, culminating in that shared-death sequence, which was planned as a visual-effects odyssey to the afterlife. Shooting had been scheduled for completion Dec. 16, after which Trumbull was to have begun fashioning the specialeffects work, a process that would have takeo as loog as six mooths.

One of the aspects of Brainstorm that attracted MGM, sources said, was Trumbull's plan to extend his gimmickry beyond the screeo and into the theater itself, through the employment of a sensurround-type audio system and expanded screeos.

Brainstorm hased oo the story The Dunlap Tapes hy Bruce Rubin (who co-wrote the screeoplay with Trumhull), takes place in North Carolina's "research triangle," an area thick with high-technology research facilities. Wood plays the disaffected wife of a into mass production.

The divisioo subsidized by the government, however, has a more sinister vision: Mind cootrol. A cooffict and chase eosue, culminating in the shared journey through death.

Trumhull's method of emphasizing the effects of the device was to show the audience the wearer's point of view in images that were more clear and colorful than the other scenes. The director shot the "mind-tripping" sceees using a high-speed, high-resolutioo 65millimeter film process, and inteoded to have the screeo wideoed for those sequences.

MGM has refused to discuss the details of the movie, but word that the story somehow involved death prompted a series of " hizarre coincidence" rumors and eveo a news report, distributed oatiooally by United Press International, that "the film Natalie Wood was in the process of making wheo she drowned includes a macabre parallel to the circumstances surrounding her death .....'

The UPI report was a "misinterpretatioo," said MGM spokesman Doo Levy, who declined to elaborate.

Writer Rubin, who also declined to comment on the story line, said, "the film in a very real way has a resonance in relationship to Natalie Wood's death .... hut it's not literal at all.

India is the seventh nation in the world to launch its own satellite into orbit, for instance, only because other, more technology advanced countries decided it wasn't worthwhile to do so. The other six countries to have launched a home-made satellite with their own rocket are the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain, France, China and Japan.

ISRO Director Dhawan said he sees space technology as a tool for the future developmeot of India, a way to bring communications to the vast areas of the country that virtually are cut off from the world; to give televisioo to remote villages - helping teach the illiterate to read and write and the farmers to get hetter crop yields - and to help manage national resources by providing up-to-date informatioo aboot forests, crops and weather.

Putting a man in space — an offer the Soviets made in 1977 and which is ofteo repeated in statements from Moscow --appears to have a low priority for Dhawan.

To make sure that everyooe in the space program understands its real aim, a stark picture is posted in each of ISRO's four centers around the country.

It shows a poverty-striken young woman holding an undernourisbed baby, a familiar scene throughout India.

American policy in Europe 'undercut' Soviet forgery campaign alleged

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP) - The State Department outlined what it described as a systematic campaign by the Soviet Union and groups friendly to Moscow to undercut American foreign policy in Europe through dissemination of forged documents.

U.S. officials said Tuesday a number of false documents have surfaced in recent years, including one which purported to present secret American plans to hlow up Western Europe with nuclear weapons in the event of war.

The officials, who hriefed reporters on the condition they not be identified, said the Soviet Union clearly was behind some of these efforts but the origin of others could not be established.

They said that over the past year and a half, the forgery outlining alleged American war plans has appeared in Great Britain, the Netherlands, Spain, Norway, Belgium, Denmark, Malta and Greece. In some cases, the document surfaced more than once. The forgery has appeared in newspaper and magazine articles and in the hands of antinuclear groups, the officials said.

According to the officials, the forgery is based in part on documents stolen in the United States in the 1960s by Sgt. Robert Johnson, a Soviet agent now serving a 20year jail term.

They said the forgery first hegan to appear two decades ago, then resurfaced in 1979 when the European allies were debating a

First step in complex process Sino-Indian talks begin today

PEKING, Dec. 9 (R) --- Indian and Chinese negotiators open talks here Thursday on the border dispute which led the two countries to war in 1962.

Although one Indian source said the discussions were opening in a spirit of "serious and amicable purposefulness," an early hreakthrough seemed improhable and the talks, due to last until Sunday, were seen as a first step in a long and complex process.

The talks were arranged during a visit to India last June by Foreign Minister Huang Hua which symbolized the slow, and still uneven, improvement in relations between the two Asian states.

The Indian side will be led by a foreign affairs secretary. Eric Gonsalves, who irritated Peking last May when he was quoted in a Malaysian newspaper as saying the Chinese were hehaving like "idiots" over Indochina.

Gonsalves' language was more diplomatic at a welcoming banquet here Tuesday night when he said: "We have no way to go other than forward with our friendly relationship."

Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Han Nianlong replied: "With our common efforts, our discussion will surely proceed smoothly and our friendly relations will grow." India's position is that full normalization cannot take place while the border questioo remains unresolved.

The Chinese helieve he border issue is such a major obstacle that the two countries should try to develop relations in other fields such as trade, which at present stands at only $100 million annually. India has now accepted an understanding that a solution to the border dispute is not a precondition for improving relations in other spheres.

NATO proposal to deploy medium-range nuclear forces in Europe to counter the Soviet installation of SS-20 missiles.

The Soviets have waged an intense campaign in Western Europe in opposition to the NATO plan. The first missiles are scheduled to be installed in 1983.

The officials said the forgery, entitled Holocaust Again for Europe is believed to be of Soviet origin because it contains some of the same military jargon and phrases as the documents Johnson passed on to the Soviets.

The State Department decided to make public details of the forgery campaign in response to a number of press inquiries prompted by an official U.S. report on Soviet "disinformation" activities released two months ago. The officials cited these other examples of forgeries:

- A Story from Vienna appearing io the Soviet press in October which alluded to U.S. document 77707-10-70," declaring neutral Austria to he in the sphere of U.S. interests and targeting a number of Austrian cities and nuclear facilities for nuclear destruction.

- The appearance of a Soviet-inspired letter in Denmark recently purporting to detail U.S. and Chinese efforts to undercut Peking's relations with North Korea. The forgery led to the expulsion from Denmark of the Soviet diplomat who was believed responsible for the passing of the document.

- A letter supposedly written by President Reagan to King Juan Carlos of Spain in which Reagan encourages the monarch to destroy his left-wing opposition and says the United States will support Spain in its dispute with Great Britain over Gibraltar. The officials said the Spanish press immediately recognized the letter to be a forgery.

Aging disease afflicts Filipino boy

MANILA, Philippines, Dec. 9 (AP) - The youngest child of a widowed Filipino vegetable vendor appearsto be suffering from a rare and incurable aging disease known as progeria, the Manila newspaper Times Jour nal reported Wednesday. Local doctors originally had diagnosed the disease as malnutrition.

Crispin Mitante, who was eight on Nov. 7, looks 10 times older, is bald, hent and wrinkled and speaks with the squeaky voice of an old man, the newspaper said.

The child is two feet and seven inches (80 cm) tall and weighs a little more than 15 pounds (7 kg), according to the paper, and his pictures have features strikingly similar to photographs of Fransie Geringer, the South African boy who suffers from the rare aging disease, progeria.

Fransie became : well-known when thousands of people contributed money to send him and his family to the United States for a trip to Disneyland. The journal quoted Crispin's 40-year-old Mother Violeta as saynew T-shirts."

Interviewed in the nearby town of Canluhang, where Mrs. Mitante lives in a windowless basement with Crispin, a daughter and two other sons, the woman told the newspaper her son's condition had heen diagnosed by a doctor as malnutrition. "The doctor said he lacks vitamins," Mrs. Mitante was quoted as saving."

Crispin's condition is not new to Mrs. Mitante. Her first child, a girl named Antonia, died at the age of 13 "looking like an old woman," the journal said without giving details of the girl's life.

But as for Crispin, the newspaper said, he is "easily the favorite" of his neighbors and vendors at the town's public market where his mother carus a living by selling vegetables.

Mrs. Mitante's other children - Wilfredo, 16; Marcelino, 13; and Teresita, 12 - are all oormal and healthy, the newspaper said, adding however, that the family is so poor that Mrs. Mitante is "more concerned about av needs than ( tion."

Snowstorm halts London

LONDON, Dec. 9 (AP) - Londoners abandoned stranded commuter trains and walked to work along electrified tracks Tuesday as much of England and Wales was hlanketed by up to cight inches of snow in the first fall of winter.

The sudden snowstorm brought large sections of Britain's rail system and London's subway network to a standstill. It blocked major highways and grounded planes at London's Heathrow and other airports for much of the morning. Trials at London's famed Old Bailey criminal court were delayed because judges and jurors were held up in the transportation chaos. Some commuters took five hours to get into London instead of the normal 45-minute train rides.

However, the snow and temperatures of minus 2 degrees centigrade (28 degrees Fahrenheit) did not stop the centenary rugby match hetween Britain's top two universities, Cambridge and Oxford, at London's Twickenham stadium.

London's Heathrow Airport, one of the world's busiest aerial gateways, was badly hit with thousaods of passengers getting delayed. British Airways domestic and European flights were heldup, some for several hours. A score were canceled.

Inbound flights were held up because taxiways at Heathrow were jammed with delayed flights awaiting take-off clearance. Flights from the United States were diverted to airports in the Irish Republic. On the roads, the Automobiles Association reported major backups as much as six miles long. Hundreds of drivers abandoned their vehicles on roadsides, adding to the chaos.

MANILA, Dec. 9 (R) - The family of a tall Filipino musician who died of a hear attack sued a funeral parlor here for shortening his legs to fit him into a coffin. a local newspaper reported Wednesday.

The People's Journal newspaper quoted the family as saying they became suspicious when they saw during mourning that the coffin was too sbort for the dead man who was six feet five inches (1.98 meters) tall.

On closer inspection it was found his knees were too close to the pelvic bones. The legs had apparently been shortcned. The family was reported to have paid 16,000 pesos ($2,000) to the parlor for the special coffin it had ordered for the musician, Jose Merto, 59.

Reagan aides deny deficits fuel inflation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (R) — The Reagan administration, which once said that budget deficits caused inflation, has declared that they would not unduly harm the economy.

The administration came to office a year ago with a promise to balance the budget by 1984, a hope it has now abandoned, and President Ronald Reagan said shortly after he entered the White House that excessive government spending had been "a major contributor to the initiation and persistance of inflation."

But all three members of the president's council of economic advisers, Murray Weidenbaum, William Niskanen and Jerry Jordan, Tuesday attempted to explain why large deficits in the future would not unduly harm the economy.

Niskanen told a conference of economists there was no compelling evidence to suggest that large deficits lead to higher inflation and interest rates.

Weindenbaum, the chairman of the council and Reagan's chief economic advise, also told the conference: "Likely prospective budget deficits, while they will be sizable, can be financed without undue pressure on financial markets or on the Federal Reserve (central bank)." The administration is currently reviewing economic projections that foresee budget deficits of $109 nillion in the current financial year, $152.3 billion in the following year and $162 hillion by financial year 1984.

Conventional economic thinking has held that large deficits force the government to borrow heavily and encourage the central bank to print new, less valuable money which boosts inflation.

Economists have also argued that hig deficits and heavy government borrowing leave less money available to private investors, a development that forces interest rates to rise.

The president's three advisers disputed this concept, saying large deficits could be financed through non-inflationary methods, including foreign investment and domestic savings.

Weindenbaum said budget deficits in coming years would represent a smaller percentage of the overall economy and, therefore, would not rob from the private sector money needed to fuel recovery.

Niskanen conceded the administration would not he able to meet all of its economic goals set last spring — balancing the budget, cutting both taxes and spending, reducing inflation and increasing defense expendi-

IDA playing vital role, Clausen says

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP) -World Bank President A.W. Clausen urged U.S. support for the International Development Association (IDA), the branch of the bank that gives long-term, interest-free loans to the world's poorest countries.

The IDA is in danger of deep cuts from the U.S. Congress. "... IDA is not a giveaway program, or a welfare agency, or a philanthropic society, or a soft-hearted and soft-headed 'soft-loan window," Clausen said.

"I say that as a former commercial banker with 31 years of experience in a tough competitive banking marketplace — and with no personal reputation, I think it fair to say, for banking softness."

Aid bills are due to come up in the House of Representatives later this week, with indications that there will be a fight to cut the $850 million allotted to IDA. A bill approved by the Senate calls for only $532 million. U.S. President Ronaid Reagan has urged support for the house bill, but did not specify anything about IDA.

If the House passes an appropriation bill — which is not certain — its text will still have to he reconciled with the Senate bill. Unless the U.S. government carries out the pledge of former President Jimmy Carter's administration to appropriate $850 million this year, many of the other 32 countries that contribute will probably cut their contributions proportionately.

On the possihility of having direct air links hetween Colombo and Penang, raised by GCEC Director-General Upali Wijewardene, Lim said the state government also looked forward to future developments which would increase and strengthen the existing good relationships between the two regions.

Trade imbalance EEC vows to tame Japan

BRUSSELS, Dec. 9 (R) — The European Economic Community (EEC) maintained its tough stance on trade relations with Japan, but failed to agree on measures to help exporters in Cyprus and the Third World.

A statement issued after an EEC foreign ministers' meeting expressed serious concern at the community's large trade deficit with Japan, forecast to reach $15 billion this year.

The EEC commission was instructed to send Tokyo a list of requests for hetter European access to Japanese markets.

But the ministers could not agree on two issues of key importance to Cyprus and to African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries.

France and Italy blocked a deal to help Cypriot fruit and vegetable exports, because they feared that this would create too much competition for their own producers.

And Britain refused to increase prices guaranteed to ACP sugar exporters unless Tate and Lyle, the company which refines this sugar, was given long-term compensation in some other form.

At a press conference after the meeting, the British foreign secretary, Lord Carrington, said the EEC states were aware of the

are to receive a 5,556 million franc ($980 million) aid package to compensate falling revenues, it was announced here. Agricultural Minister Edith Cresson said the package was designed to reach all farmers, including those with the lowest earo-

Informed sources said $530 million off the aid would come from reserves huilt up by the state-owned Credit Agricole Bank since 1977. But the package failed to satisfy National Federation of Farming Unions President Francois Guillaume, who criticized the amount, the origin and the distribution of the political significance of both issues for the countries involved.

Cyprus has complained bitterly about the EEC's intransigent attitude, arousing fears here of a deterioration in Western Europe's relations with the strategically-placed Mediterranean island.

The ACP states have demanded higher prices for the 1.5 million tons of sugar they sell annually to the EEC, saying they should get the same 8.5 percent price increase given this year to the community's own producers. Both issues are linked to complex negotiations within the EEC on reform of the community's own agricultural policy. Diplomats have said privately that continued stalling could bave unfortunate diplomatic results, and Lord Carrington said he hoped further negotiations could produce an agreement soon. During their two-day meeting, the ministers decided to relax trade restrictions on steel imports from the rest of the world for 1982. These restrictions, to be negotiated by the commission with steel producers in other industrial countries and the developing world, are intended to protect the EEC steel industry from the impact of a present market crisis.

But the ministers failed to overcome West German objections to extra cash aids for retraining redundant steel workers inside the community.

They also tried to finalize a joint EEC negotiating stance on a multifiber arrangement, which regulates trade in textiles between industrialized and developing countries.

Talks on renewing the arrangement, which expires at the end of this month, are taking place in Geneva, but have not made substantial progress.

Italy, Britain and France, who have demanded greater protection for their textile industries against Third World competition, insisted today that ceilings be placed on lowcost imports, EEC sources said. But other countries, led by West Germany, said this would spoil any chances of agreement with Third World countries already resisting attempts to cut back textiles sales. consider these next week. Eurodollars are U.S. dollars held on deposit generally outside the United States, with London the predominant center for trading. The CFTC action permits hanks and multinational corporations to buy and sell these dollar deposits at a future date and thus protect themselves against international interest rate volatility.

China to strengthen economic legislation

PEKING, Dec. 9 (AFP) — China is to strengthen its economic legislation with scores of new laws on licenses and patents, company rights, trade marks, accounting and depreciation assets, New China News Agency reported Wednesday.

Authorities were also drafting new texts on implementing taxation of foreign firms, to be passed hy the National People's Congress (NPC) now meeting here, and on management of joint ventures with foreign interests, it said.

NCNA gave no precise date for implementation of the new laws, saying only that it would take place "iater."

U.S. accepts bids for oil hunt NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (R) - The U.S. gov-Shell expected to begin drilling in 18

NEW YORK, Dec. 9(R) — The U.S. government has accepted bids totalling almost $425 million for the right to drill for oil gas in the deepest areas of the Atlantic ever explored.

The Shell Oil Company dominated the sale, accounting for 75 percent of the bids accepted for leases on tracts 1,300 to 7,790 feet (400 to 2,370 meters) deep off New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Shell was the hig spender," Richard Barnett of the interior department told Reuters Tuesday. "They came in bigb on a lot of the tracts."

The government received 240 hids totalling $576.8 million and accepted 98 offers which were subject to approval by the interior department, It was the department's third sale of leases on the outer continental shelf. The two previous sales, for sites in shallower water, raised $1.2 billion.

The highest hid for a single tract came from Shell, which offered $41.5 million for an area 6,000 to 7,000 feet (1,800 to 2,100 meters) deep off Delaware.

Lloyd Otteman, the general manager ot Shell's offshore division, said drilling at 7,000 feet (over 2,000 meters) would require a major technological breakthrough. He said an exploratory well in the deepest part of the tract would cost about $40 million. Shell expected to begin drilling in 18 months to two years, but industry sources said it would take at least a decade hefore production would be possible from such depths.

The area to be explored is part of a reef thought by geologists to extend from the Gulf of Mexico to offshore Nova Scotia. Officially called the Great Jurassic Fossil Reef, the structure is known in the oil industry as the "great yellow reef" hecause it is marked as a possible new oil source in yellow on many maps. The deepest well ever drilled in the Atlantic went down 5,600 feet (1,700 meters) in the Atlantic trench area of the Grand Banks off Canada.

In another development on the oil front, Malagasy authorities have signed an agreement with Mobil Oil for the U.S. company to explore for oil over 30,000 square kilometers (nearly 12,000 square miles) off the African island's northwest coast, a Geneva consulting firm said Tuesday.

Petroconsultants, which said it was acting for the Malagasy National Military Office for Strategic Industries (OMNIS), said the authorities had signed a participation agreement with Mobil in Tananarive last Friday. It was the first such accord since the Malagasy republic passed new legislation governing oil exploration and exploitation last year, a Petroconsultants spokesman said.

$218b spending package ory rebels fail to scuttle bill

LONDON, Dec. 9 (R) - Rebellion rippled through the ranks of Britain's ruling Conservative Party in Parliament Tuesday night despite an optimistic assessment by Finance Minister Sir Geoffrey Howe that signs of economic recovery were increasing. Sir Ian Gilmour, former deputy foreign minister sacked by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in September for criticizing government monetarist policies, led an organized band of 14 Conservatives who abstained from a House of Commons vote.

Their protest did not prevent the government from securing a majority of 42 in the 635-seat house in support of the chancellor of the exchequer's 115 billion sterling ($218 billion) state spending package for 1982. The vote was 307 to 265.

The revolt by the 14 Conservatives registered their discontent with the government's economic policy and their fears that it could cost them their parliamentary seats at the next general election.

Earlier, Sir Geoffrey Howe said that signs of economic recovery were beginning to multiply. "Even in today's hostile world, the

Africa, whose economic problems have grown over the last year as the price of gold has dropped, is increasing the use of its gold reserves as security for badly needed foreign exchange, the Reserve Bank said Wednes-

Dealers said South Africa, by far the world's biggest gold producer, is no longer able to sell large chunks of its huge gold reserves to the international buillion market to raise money without the risk of pushing down the price of gold.

Gold has already dropped below $410 an ounce after reaching a record $875 m Jannary last year. The Reserve Bank, the country's central bank, said South Africa had entered into swap agreements with foreign banks which provide currency loans in return. It did not say how much gold was involved but it said the swaps were connected with a drop in the country's gold boldings of around 487,000 ounces last month.

In October, more than two million ounces of gold, worth more than $800,000 million at current prices, were believed by dealers to have been shipped from South Africa as secnrity for loans raised through similar swaps. Last year, South Africa had a balance of payments surplus of 2.8 billion rand (then worth $3.8 billion) as the high gold price buoyed up the domestic economy. But this year it has turned into a deficit, running eurrently at five billion rand ($5.12 billion) as the gold price fell.

Economists say South Africa has borrowed more than two billion rand ($2.05 billion) overseas this year to prop up its gold and foreign exchange reserves and this year's swaps may have added about one billion rand ($1.02 billion).

The economists said South Africa is thought to have made two gold swaps of four million ounces each with Swiss banks during the last big decline in the gold price in 1976 and 1977.

prospect of a reversal in Britain's humiliating economic decline is now before us," he told parliament.

Leading off a debate on his 115 billion sterling ($218 billion) spending package for 1982 announced last week, the chancellor of the exchequer declared: "The signals of recovery are beginning to multiply.

The spending package cuts by two percent the real value of welfare benefits for nearly three million unemployed. Conservative critics think this could be particularly harmful tothe party's re-election prospects.

Former Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath, a consistent critic of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, attacked her monetarist policy in his first speech during the current parliamentary session.

He denounced as "completely fallacious and unacceptable" the government's argu-ment that the unemployed must also suffer when working people were enduring economic hardships. As for the government's monetarist strategy, in which the aim is to control the money supply in order to reduce inflation, he declared: "There never was any intellectual justification for monetarism. There is no practical justification for it today."

Heath added that the government should take into account the position of the United States which, he said, was heading for its deepest depression since 1931.

Wholesale prices rise 6.3% in U.S.

્યુ

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP) - Food prices tumbled hut energy costs climbed last month as wholesale prices rose 6.3 percent, slightly off from the already-moderate pace of October, the government said Wednesday,

With only one month left, inflation for the year is certain to be under the 11.8 percent wholesale average for 1980. Through November, inflation at the wholesale level stood at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.4 percent, Labor Department officials said.

The department's new report said its measure of wholesale prices for finished goods - the producer price index - was up 0.5 percent last month after seasonal adjust-

If November's rate held for 12 straight months, the increase would be 6.3 percent, the department said. Officials compute the annual rate by compounding a monthly figure that is more precise than the rounded-off 0.5 percent that is published.

The November increase was better than the 0.6 percent advance of October, but more than the 0.1 percent of August and the 0.2 percent of September, the government said.

The acceleration in November was attributed to a 0.9 percent increase in energy prices, the sharpest rise since April. Those prices had fallen 0.4 percent in October. The increase in November was due to rise in prices of gasoline and natural gas, the report said. Food prices were down 0.5 percent in November, more than the 0.2 percent of October and the biggest fall since the 0.6 percent drop of February, the report said. Prices for goods other than food and energy climbed 0.8 percent after a 1 percent rise in October. Those increases were attributed to higher new car prices, which advanced 0.9 percent in November, down from the 4.2 percent gain of October.

Financial Roundup Dollar rates scale new high

By H. J. Hammond

JEDDAH, Dec. 9 - While gold and silver prices continued to go down, the American dollar picked up more ground on both the European and New York markets over Wednesday.

Gold fell from around $418 to $410 per ounce in what was described as 'cautious' trading' in London. The dollar, meanwhile, was boosted further by firming in Eurodollar interest rates as well as renewed concerns over the Polish situation.

In the local markets, rival deposit rates picked up for the third day running, taking the week-fixed rival deposit rate to 71/2 -8½ percent from 4 - 5 percent quoted a week ago.

Rising Eurodollar interest rates continued to be the center of attraction Wednesday, after the dollar closed firmer in New York hourses the night before. The one-year Eurodollar deposit rate was quoted at 131/2 - 13% percent in early Wednesday trading, but later rose to levels of 13 9/16 --- 13 t 1/t6 percent both in Lon-don and Bahrain markets.

The rises in the sbort dated funds were not as significant, but the one-month dollar interest rate is now over the 12 percent level to trade at t2 3/t6 -- 12 5/16 percent compared with 11 5/16 - 12 3/16 percent on Tuesday, "Fed Funds" closed at 12 percent levels in New York on Tuesday night indicating that the American Central Bank was still undecided on where it wants to see American interest rates go after the downward trend we noted over last weekend.

In the Wednesday European exchange markets, the dollar gained more than 2 cents against the British pound to trade at .9200 from 1.9430 Tuesday. Similarly, the German mark fell back to 2.2500 levels at one stage, compared with 2.2400 levels

Tuesday. The renewed Polish crises seems to be affecting the mark again. Observers believe that the mark/dollar rate could move back in favor of the German currency if Dome hard economic data showing an improvement in Germany's halance of payments situation comes out. So far, this has seemed to elude the mark unlike the Japanese yen which improved its position against the dollar from 230.00 levels to 218.00 now.

In other currency news, the French frane and Swiss franc also fell hack against the dollar to take the French franc to 5.6900 levels and the Swiss franc to 1.8360 hy mid-day trading Wednesday. In the local markets, spot rival/dollar rates opened at 3.4200-10, but some active buying interest developed out of Bahraini-based OBU'S offshore booking units - which took the spot exchange rate to 3.4210-t5. Jeddah Bankers reported that some commercialdemand for dollars was also seen.

In the money markets, rival deposit rates continued to firm with rates going up by between 1 - 11/2 percent in some tenors. The rises seem to affect the short-dated funds more and one-month rates were quoted at 8% - 11% percent. Overnight funds were still stable between 7 and 8 percent, while the year-fixed deposit rates were unchanged at t t 1/2 -- 121/2 percent with few bids in that tenor.

LONDON, Dec. 9 (AFP) - Liverpool. forced into extra-time by Arsenal in their English League Cup fourth round replay at Anfield Tuesday night, took a grip to gu through with three late goals, one by substitute Craig Johnston.

Johnston, brought on for Sammy Lee after 72 minutes, grabbed the vital breaktbrough in the fourth minute of extra-time. It was also his first for Liverpool since his move from Middlesbrough for £650,000 at the end of last season.

Graeme Souness set up the chance and the Johannesburg-born Johnston, who used to play in Australia, sent it past Arsenal's deputy goalkeeper George Wood from an acute angle.

Six minutes later, Arsenal's fate was sealed as Bryan Robson brought down lan Rush as he moved into the area to take a Kenny Dalglish pass. It was a penalty heyond dispute and England's Terry McDermott stepped up to drive firmly past Wood.

In the 18th minute of extra-time. Dalglish took advantage of a Johnston pass, to slam the hall high into the Arsenal net from the edge of the area.

Liverpool are home to giant-killing Barnsley in the next mund. The Yorkshiremen have already knocked out three First Division clubs.

Brighton frustrated Southampton's bid to go to the top of the English First Division for the first time ever with a 2-0 victory which took them into sixth place — their highest in the top flight.

Southampton, who had played with such flair and penetration in beating Manchester United on Saturday, were suffocated by Brighton's expert detensive play. Southamp-ton were beaten by two goals in the space of five minutes. After 62 minutes Andy Ritchie curled a shot round the defensive wall for his eighth goal of the season.

Dynamo pressed almost incessantly but lacked enough ideas to get past the Swedish defense. IFK proved vastly dangerous on counterattacks and after Nilsson scored, the Swedes missed other good scoring opportunities such as a solo run by center-forward Corneliusson in 73rd who dribbled past the goalie hut sent the hall wide from some five meters.

Chinaglia nets seven

England erawled to 181 for four wiekets at stumps Wednesday on a docile wicket after winning the toss against India on the opening Gavaskar in the second slip position. Eight day of the second cricket Test in this Southruns later, Gooch mistimed a shot off a flighern Indian city. ted hall from spinner Ravi Shastri when he was on 58 to give Gavaskar his second catch.

The tourists lost two wickets toward the end of the day's play. Stumps were drawn seven minutes ahead of schedule because of the lengthening shadows. Skipper Keith Fletcher, who came on the wicket after the fall of nightwatchman John Lever, survived a confident leg-before wicket appeal just before the day's play ended. At close, David Gower, the 24-year-old Leicestershire lefthand cricketer, was hatting with 62 runs, while Fletcher had yet to open his score.

Although the wicket at the Karpalaka State Cricket Association (KSCA) Stadium gave no help to the bowlers, the English first innings was marked by dull scoring. The Englishmen hit 84 runs before lunch, 46 in the second session and 51 after the teabreak. Chris Tavare, who partnered Gower in a 84-run third-wicket stand, was trapped legbefore-wicket by Madanlal in his first over with the second new ball. In the next over, Kapil Dev dismissed Lever with a sharp inswinger that struck the Englishman on the front pad right in front of the stumps, Graham Gooch and Geoff Boycott opened their team's innings. Boycott, England's most experienced player, gave Krishnamachari Srikkant at forward short-leg and easy catch when he was on nine but the 21-year-old Indian failed to hold it. Dilip Vengsarkar muffed another catch before the lunch interval to give Gooch a new lease of life.

where she reached the thrid round as a qualfier, was in superh touch to beat Australia's Bernadette Randall 6-2, 6-2. Both players were unseeded.

In the men's singles second round action, third seed Anders Jarryd of Sweden crashed 4-6, 6-3, 4-6 to unseeded Australian Brett Edwards.

It was announced by promoters in New York that, a 10-event professional men's tennis tour limited to players 35 years of age and over will hegin play in 1982.

The E.F. Hutton Grand Champions circuit is modelled after the International Men's Volvo Grand Prix Circuit with players competing for tournament points at each event in pursuit of a berth in the $75,000 championship finals.

Mahre won with a total time of 1:38.89, outpacing his great rival Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden by just 15 hundredths of a second. Italy's Paulo de Chiesa, 79 hundreds of a second behind, took third place.

Mahre's victory reinforced his lead in the world championship standings, which is already considerable after only three races and one combined event. The American now has 75 points - 40 more than Stenmark.

On a surface softened hy mild temperatures overnight, Mahre finished second in both legs of Wednesday's event. In the first leg victory was taken by Stenmark, and in the second Chiesa was fastest, earning himself overall third place despite finishing ninth first time.

HOBART, Australia, Dec. 9 (AP) --Tasmánia Wednesday earned a moral victory over the West Indians cricket team after their match resulted in a draw at the Tasmania Cricket Association ground here.

With almost all of Monday being lost to poor weather there was never going to be a result. But Tasmania clearly produced the better performance. After setting the West Indians a far from impressive target of 204. Tasmania managed to dismiss the tourists for 203. At the close Tasmania were 100 for two wickets in their second innings. The West Indians could hardly be satisfied with their batting despite half centuries by Viv Richards (57) and Clive Lloyd (51). Richards had planned to use the game for a long workout in an effort to find form hefore the first Test against Australia starting in Melbourne on December 26.

Viv Richards disappointed again Wednesday despite posting his highest score on tour. Richards, who scored a century on each

Ali hopes to take on Weaver

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 9 (AP) -Muhammad Ali, soundly beaten by Larry Holmes in a bid for the World Boxing Council heavyweight title last year, said Tuesday he would challenge Mike Weaver after heating Trevor Berbick Friday night. Weaver is the World Boxing Association champion.

"I think the WBA was more recognition than the WBC because that's the one I had the WBA," Ali said. Ali was recognized as champion by the WBA when he retired in 1979. He had regained the WBA title when he outpointed Leon Spinks at New Orleans September 15,1978.

But first there is the 27-year-old Berbick, whose biggest victory in 21 pro fights, of which he has won 18, was a ninth-round knockout over former WBA champion John Tate June 20, 1980. Three fights later, on April 11,1921, he went 15 rounds with Holmes in an Unsuccessful title hid.

Class Defense

go down one. Better defense would have stopped the contract. West can tell from seeing dummy at trick one that South has the A-K of spades and ace of diamonds for his opening bid. He can also tell, after winning the queen of clubs at trick two, that the only chance for the defense lies in scoring a trump trick for his side that does not exist naturally.

WA ZXQK XQFCK

With this in view, West plays a low club at trick three, instead of continuing with the ace. As it happens, East is able to cooperate by ruffing dummy's jack of clubs with the eight of spades.

South must now go down one, whatever he does. His best play is to overruff, hoping to find the remaining trumps divided 2-2. However, it turns out that West has the J-10-x and has a sure trump trick coming once East's eight forces out the king. Note that West does not lead the K-A and a low club, since East might make the mistake of ruffing low on the basis of South's having the queen of clubs. Instead, West leads the K-Q of clubs, announcing he has the ace, and continues with a low club in order to emphasize the importance of East's ruffing with his highest trump.

Turkey opposes Papandreou move Greece holds up NATO session

BRUSSELS, Dec. 9 (AFP) — A Greek request to include in the final communique of this week's North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) Defense Planning Committee a paragraph guaranteeing against attack from a fellow NATO member, held up the final session Wcdnesday a diplomatic source said.

Greece, represented by its new Soclialist prime minister, Andreas Papandreou, in his dual capacity as defense minister, wanted the final communique of the two-day meeting to give guarantees not only against an attack by a Warsaw Pact country but against aggression by Turkey.

Turkey strongly objected to this suggestion and the meeting was adjourned until later Wednesday. The source said that Turkish Defense Minister Umit Haluk Bayulken, supported by several colleagues, went on to demand that Papandrecu - who made withdrawal from NATO one of his main electoral promises - clearly state his government's position toward the alliance.

(Greece and Turkey have been at logger-. heads for years over Cyprus. Greece first withdrew from NATO in 1974 after fellow memhers failed to act against Turkey's invasion of the Mediterranean island.)

After the first day of the Planning Committee meeting Tuesday Papandreou stirred up confusion on the Greek position by declaring that "the process of Greek disengagement is already under way."

He, however, stopped short of threatening an actual pullout. But declining to explain exactly what he implied by" disengagement," Papandreou said certain points of an agreement worked out last year hetween the previ-

Papandreou cited the quarrel with Turkey over control of Acgean Sea air space. Until 1974. Greece, controlled this space. But under the Rogers agreement, control was to be shared with Turkey under NATO command terms still being negotiated. Observers speculated that these negotiations might he suspended.

Calling for a review of Greece's position within the NATO command at Wednesday's meeting, the Turkish defense minister said that "nobody put any pressure on Greece to sign the Rogers plan," a source close to the committee said.

Meanwhile, the defense ministers, representing the 14 NATO countries minus France, which pulled out of the command, agreed to accept "with satisfaction" an entry application from Spain.

On NATO financing, a diplomatic source said that the planning committee had agreed that last year's call for each government to increase its contribution by three percent in real terms be seen as "a target, not a commitment."

American Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the Planning Committee that the European allies would be consulted on any deployment of the U.S. rapid deployment force whenever " vital NATO interests" were involved. Weinherger also reiterated a U.S. appeal for increased caution in the transfer of technology to the Soviet Union.

firm Allen founded in 1972.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP) - The U.S. Justice Department has expanded its inquiry of Richard V. Allen to include the national security adviser' a failure to list his consulting firm's clients on his financial disclosure form, a government official said Tuesday.

The official, who asked not to be identified. said 'Tuesday Justice Department investigators met with officials of the Government Ethics Office in the past few days to discuss the client question.

"The judgment that he should have listed (his clients) is going to be made," said the official, adding that the only question was whether Allen would be required to file a second amended disclosure form now, or wait until the Justice Department review is over. The deputy White House council, who has heen handling the Allen case did not return several telephone calls Tuesday about the client question. Peter Dailey, National Security Council spokesman, said he was unaware of any plans for Allen to file an additional amendment to itial finan sciosure iorm. The discrepancy in the sale date is one of two matters the Justice Department said last week that it is still looking at in its review of whether an independent special prosecutor should be appointed to investigate Allen. Willful falsification of a government ethics disclosure form is a felony punishable by up to five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

WARSAW, Dec. 9 (R) - Solidarity chief Lech Walesa conferred with Polish archbishop Jozef Glemp Wednesday following Glemp's intervention to prevent a major clash hetween the ruling Communists and the free trade union movement.

The meeting came as the official media maintained a propaganda offensive against the union, accusing its leaders of working for the overthrow of communism and courting national catastrophe.

The union's powerful Warsaw branch hit back by saying it was the government, not Solidarity, which was making confrontation inevitable. Archbishop Glemp met Walesa after he (Glemp) had sent letters to the Sejm (parliament), party leader Wojciech Jaruzelski and Walesa pleading for moderation and renewed dialogue.

Solidarity's Warsaw information service, said Glemp considered it his duty to speak in the face of mounting social tension. "The church expresses profound concern and fear that the enactment of the law (on emergency powers) will disrupt domestic peace, sever the threads of an agreement taking shape with such difficulty and unleash a formidable social conflict," the letter said.

"With a view to the good of the working people and of the state, the church warns the Sejm against taking a decision which would weigh tragically on the country's destiny," it said.

The letter coincided with a statement by Solidarity's No. 2 leader Miroslaw Krupinski, who said adoption of the emergency law would trigger an open-ended general strike.

The spokesman of the union's Warsaw branch, Janusz Onyszkiewicz, denied charges read out on national television Tuesday night that the union had established a constituent assembly to conduct free national elections behind the government's back. Onyszkiewicz added that television reports on contingency planning by Solidarity branches were part of a government campaign to intimidate society.

The television had said regional union hranches were stockpiling handages, distributing petrot hombs to workers and planning to take over mines and factories. Onyszkiewicz said such reports were an attempt to stir public indignation against the union and pressure its leaders into tempering their military at a policy-making meeting on Friday.

The union's national commission meeting is due to be held in the Gdansk shipyard where the movement was born 15 months ago. Five other Solidarity leaders joined the talks between the primate and Walesa later Wednesday.

Good Morning By Jihad Al Khazen

A friend of mine, a professor in a reputable university, told me he spent last year doing a big and complicated project Thousands upon thousands of manhours' were taken up by the work ( he was aided by a large research tcam.) In the end, he said solemnly, all the conclusions, ("properly arrived at" he said) were put in a long and detailed report. "Here is the report," he said finally, "you may read it if you wish."

Well, I always thought that some work done at universities was a bit, shall we say, superfluous, but my friend's project surely takes the biscuit. Its theme was "When Is It Best to Call Someone on the Phone. " The research studied the daily habits of thousands of people from all walks of life -clergymen. lawyers, engineers, journalists, shopping-bag ladies, the lot - all in the cause of determining when it is best to give them a call and pass the time of day. I read the first fcw pages then closed the tome and handed it back to my friend with disappointment," As usual with you scientists," I said, "You blew it."

"A delicate little subject like this - an artistic subject where instinct is all and you kill it with your graphs and computers and over-detailed questionaires. Why oh why didn't you come to me first? Why did you waste your time and that of your bright-eyed and bushy-tailed young assistants with such work when I could have told you everything in five minutes?"

He started to say something but I cut him short. "No need to apologize this tune. But please take pen to paper while 1 tell you a thing or two about it all. As to what you please to call your 'report' ..." (Here I let my voice trail off sarcastically.) "Ready," I said, as patiently as I could Then let's start:

"The first category is that of doctors and dentists. The rule here is that you can call them and they'd have all the time in the world for you if you are feeling fine. Don't try to call them if you're not. They simply will not be there...

"Then of course there's your bank manager. And here it all depends on whether you're a millionaire or not. If you are, then you can be sure of long friendly conversations with him any time you want. If you're not a millionaire, and were calling for the usual reason - more overdraft please — then it's 'don't call us we'll call you' every time ... "Then there's your friendly neighborhood plumber. You'd think that you must call him the minute the kitchen sink starts overflowing. That would he a waste of time. What you have to do is to wait for the whole kitchen to overflow, with the water seeping through to the living room and ruining your carpets. It's only then that you can he sure he'll answer, saying most probably he can't make it as his motherm-law has just ... "Hey! I say, wake up! I've just started ... " But it was no use. Hc was fast asleep. No imagination, those scientists .... no appreciation for what we, the gifted amateors, can contribute ...

Prussian kings in a remote pine forest, is the first of its kind in 11 years. It has been postponed twice in the past two years - once because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and once because of the unrest in Poland.

Schmidt is under pressure in Bonn to come up with more than a repetition of his meeting last month with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, where they agreed to differ on how to curb nuclear weapons in Europe but also to keep in contact.

Conservative opposition leader Helmut Kohl has said the talks with Honecker must cover "more than missiles". He wants rules eased for West Germans visiting relatives in the East as a precondition for economic agreements such as continuing the "swing" credit.

The swing is 850 million marks ($400 million) of interest-free credit for East Germany to buy goods from West Germany. It is due to run out on Dec. 31.

Bonn would like a cut in the 25-mark ($11) a day minimum that visitors to East Germany must exchange. The number of West Germans visiting the East has fallen by half since the requirement was more than doubled to this figure 14 months ago.

But any attempt to turn the Schmidt-Honecker meeting into hard negotiations has little hope of success, according to informed sources in East Berlin and in Bonn. Relations between the two Germanys are complicated and emotive, tied up with deep-rooted feelings of greater German nationalism and equally deep distrust of cach other's political and economic systems.

West Germany recognizes the East German state but not East German nationality.

S.Africa office blasted

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 9 (R) - An explosion caused extensive damage to the Cape Town offices of the South African Department of Cooperation and Development (black affairs) carly Wednesday, police said. A police spokesman said sabotage was suspected. No one was injured in the blast which occurred at about 3,30 am. The banned African National Congress which is pleged to overthrow white rule in South Africa by force, has claimed responsibility for most incidents in a stepped-up sabotage campaign this year.

Allen said he does not recall who gave him that advice and the White House has said it has been unable to identify the source of that advice.

Danish premier quits; to explore coalition

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 9'(R) -Denmark's Qucen Margrethe II accepted the resignation of Prime Minister Anker Joergensen's Social Democratic minority government Wednesday after his party suffered major losses in Tuesday's general election, palace sources said.

Joergensen has said he will continue as caretaker prime minister and conduct negotiations to try to form a new administration. The queen gave loergensen a mandate to hegin these negotiations with the eight other partics in the new Parliament.

Joergensen, the leader of successive Social Democratic minority governments since 1975, said he would start talks on a new cabinet Thursday. His Social Democrats, the largest party, lost nine mainland seats in the Parliament (Folketing) but gained two in the north Atlantic communities of Greenland and the Faroe Islands.

This gave them a total of 61 seats, or two more than reported earlier when only main-

Joergensen said in a statement that the new Parliament was more fragmented than before the vote and that prospects of forming a new administration capable of tackling Denmark's serious economic problems were "nearly hopeless." The election, Denmark's sixth in 10 years, was called when his government lost a parliamentary censure motion on its economic policy last month.

Admitting that his party's loss of seven parliamentary seats was a "very disappointing result." Joergensen said the election had also dealt a death blow to the right-wing opposition. # gains majority WELLINGTON, Dcc. 9 (R) - The final result of New Zcaland's general election. following the counting of absentce votes, Wednesday confirmed a slim parliamentary majority for Prime Minister Rohert Muldoon's National Party. The result originally declared on Nov. 28 appeared to have produced a hung parliament.

It gave 46 seats in the 92-member Parliament to the conservative National Party and 44 to the opposition .Labor Party, with the Social Credit Party holding the balance of power with two seats.

But the correction of a counting error in one constituency gave an extra seat to the National Party, and with it an overall majority of two seats, pending the counting of absentee votes in four marginal seats, which has just taken place. These four seats were cemented Wednesday into the National Party, giving it 47 seats to lahor's 43 and Social Credit's two.

After the appointment of a non-voting speaker (parliamentary chairman) from National Party ranks, Muldoon will have a paper-thin, but adequate, overall majority of one seat. He said he was delighted with the final result.

The losing Labor Party has two avenues still open to it - a district court recount or a high court petition. They have three days to decide on the former and 49 days on the latter, but neither course was considered likely. All three parties are impoverished after the election campaign and Labor was unlikely to undertake the heavy expense of legal action without very strong hopes of suc-

Portugal's EEC entry gets Thatcher support

LONDON, Dec. 9 (AFP) - Portugal can rely on Britain's solid support for its application to join the European Economic Com-munity (EEC), British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Portuguese Premier Francisco Pinto Balsemao bere Wednesday.

Portuguese sources said Pinto Balsemao had expressed his appreciation of the British pledge to speed up negotiations for Portugal's EEC entry.

The Portuguese premicr told a press conference after the meeting that obstacles to Portugal's membership should be overcome during 1982, and that his country could hecome n full-fiedged EEC member by 1984. He said, however, he was disappointed at the lack of progress in membership negotiations over the past few months.

Pinto Balsemao said that EEC membership for Portugal was as important politically as economically, since it would help Lisbon emerge from the transition period following military rule. He warned that Portugal's membership of the EEC should not be into custody. associated with the

Cuba to try 11 enezuelan plane hijackers

HAVANA, Dec. 9 (Agencies) — Eleven men were responsible for Monday's hijack of three Venezuelan airliners, which ended here Tuesday night with the surrender of the three teams of commandos, it was learned here Wednesday. The Cuhan government announced that the hijackers had been arrested and would be tried before" a competent tribunal".

Neither the nationality nor political affiliation of the group was immediately known, although crew members and many passengers from the three planes said they had spoken with Venezuelan accents.

According to pilots Jose Vidal and Ricardo Matta, the hijackers had meant to go to Panama and negotiate the liberation of 31 Venezuelan political prisoners as well as the requested ransom of $10 million. The hijackers had never intended to go to Nicaragua, the pilots said, adding that some of the hijackers had said, "the Sandinistas have too many

The pilots criticized the attitudes of the authorities in Colombia, Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador when the planes were forced to land in those countries during the two-day ordeal.

The pilot of the Avensa airlines Boeing 727. Frank Hendel, said he "received very bad treatment in Colombia and in Guatemala it was even worse." He said when his bij acked plane landed in those countries, the hijackers demanded it be refucied, but government authorities used delaying tactics, which created a critical situation inside the plane.

The pilot on one of two Aeropostal Airline DC-9s, Jose Vidal, said he disagreed strongly with the delaying tactics of the Colombian government and the intransigence of the military authorities in Honduras.
